We need a forward looking agriculture policy that is both fiscally responsible with hard working American taxpayers' money and accountable to our country's need to level the playing field for American agricultural products in the global marketplace. California's 22nd District represents America's fruit and vegetable basket, producing many of the healthy fruits and vegetables that contribute to a healthy diet. As a former member of the House Agriculture Committee, I continue to work hard to promote the diverse crops that our hardworking farmers harvest, along with opening oversees markets to give the world the opportunity to know that "Californian Grown" means high quality agriculture products.
